From The Co-Principals

2014 was a challenging year for all schools as there were a large number of changes to the examinations system which means that it is not possible to directly compare these results with those of previous years. As well as a 'raising of the bar' the main changes were:

- GCSE English – removal of the speaking and listening component from June 2014 exam series (part way through the students' course)
- All examinations had to be taken at the end of Year 11
- Students cannot resit individual modules
- GCSE short courses are not included
- Only 2 non-GCSE qualifications can be included for each student
- Only the first entry for any exam will be included in the official performance tables

All schools were faced with a dilemma when the then Secretary of State for Education, Michael Gove made the announcement that if any student retakes an examination and improves their grade, it will not be reflected in the school's performance tables. This announcement was made in September 2013 after schools had already agreed their examination entry strategy and caused a lot of anxiety for students, parents and teachers. At Collingwood we entered a group of students for GCSE English and a very small number for GCSE Mathematics. In line with other schools we have agreed that parents and students would be most interested in our 'best' entry results and that we should include all high-quality qualifications for each student. Colleges and employers will continue to value these all qualifications and so do we.

Despite all these changes our 2014 GCSE results were the best in the last 5 years and 3% above 2013. 209 students or 66.2% achieved 5 or more A*-C GCSEs including English and Maths. There were 258 students or 82% who passed at least 5 A*-C GCSEs (or equivalent) and 66 students or 21% achieved at least 5 or more A*/A GCSEs. Over 26% of all our GCSE examinations were graded as A*/A, which is an incredible achievement particularly when it was far more difficult to obtain top grades.

In Maths and English, 75% of all students achieved an A*-C grade.

The curriculum at Collingwood ensures that all students are able to follow a suitable range of courses and this is evidenced by 97% of students achieving at least 1 A*-C grade.

In the 6th form, our students were very successful in gaining places at university or employment and over 50% of all A level grades were A*-B. At AS, over 37% of grades were A*-B.

More curriculum changes and the continued raising of the bar will make year on year comparisons even more difficult in future but our students and staff worked very hard to achieve excellent results and we are very proud of their achievements.
